

From stately homes to football stadiums – there has been a rise in the popularity of “approved premises” weddings and a decrease in both registry offices (now at 50%) and religious weddings (39%).

BLUE GENES

When women are depressed, people assume it's to do with a relationship, reveals a new report. However, it claims, women are just as likely as men to get depressed about work, and men are as likely as women to suffer depression because of poor relationships.

TWIST AND SHOUT

A new kind of condom apparently gives your love life a boost. InSpiral condoms have a spring-action motion (thanks to a clever spiral design) that enhances stimulation for both partners. Sounds a bit scary, but a survey by Marie Stopes International found that 62% of respondents agreed that “the spiral heightened sexual pleasure”. (£2.99 for three from Boots.) Twisting the night away...

ALL WORK AND NO PLAY?

33% of dads admit that they don't take an equal share of baby care, but 49% say they would stay at home to look after their children if finances permitted. A new survey from Gallop shows that 66% of British fathers want more time with their children and they put the blame for not seeing more of their kids on the UK's workaholic culture.
